Dear Mr. Baker:

I am writing in response to several letters requesting additional information to obtain a current mining permit. I appreciate your patience in awaiting this response.

I have enclosed an enlarged map highlighting the areas that the stone will actually be removed from. The red areas on the map indicate those areas. The permit was obtained the end of september 2001, and renewed the end of september 2002. However operation on the permit was delayed awaiting an archeological study. The study was completed october 8, 2002. And operation on this permit finally began in december 2002. The permit expires in september 2003, and I am unable to say if I will renew it or not at this point.

I would like to make a point of notifying you that I have not removed any stone from this permit with any mechanized vehicle up to this point. As I have explained to you over the phone my operation consists of removing surface stone from this permit. I am obtaining this permit because there may be rare occasion that I would lift a rock that is partially covered, underground, with my machine.

I do not request a variance from any operation or reclamation requirements at this time.

Please feel free to contact me if there is any further information needed to obtain this permit. I appreciate your patience in this matter.

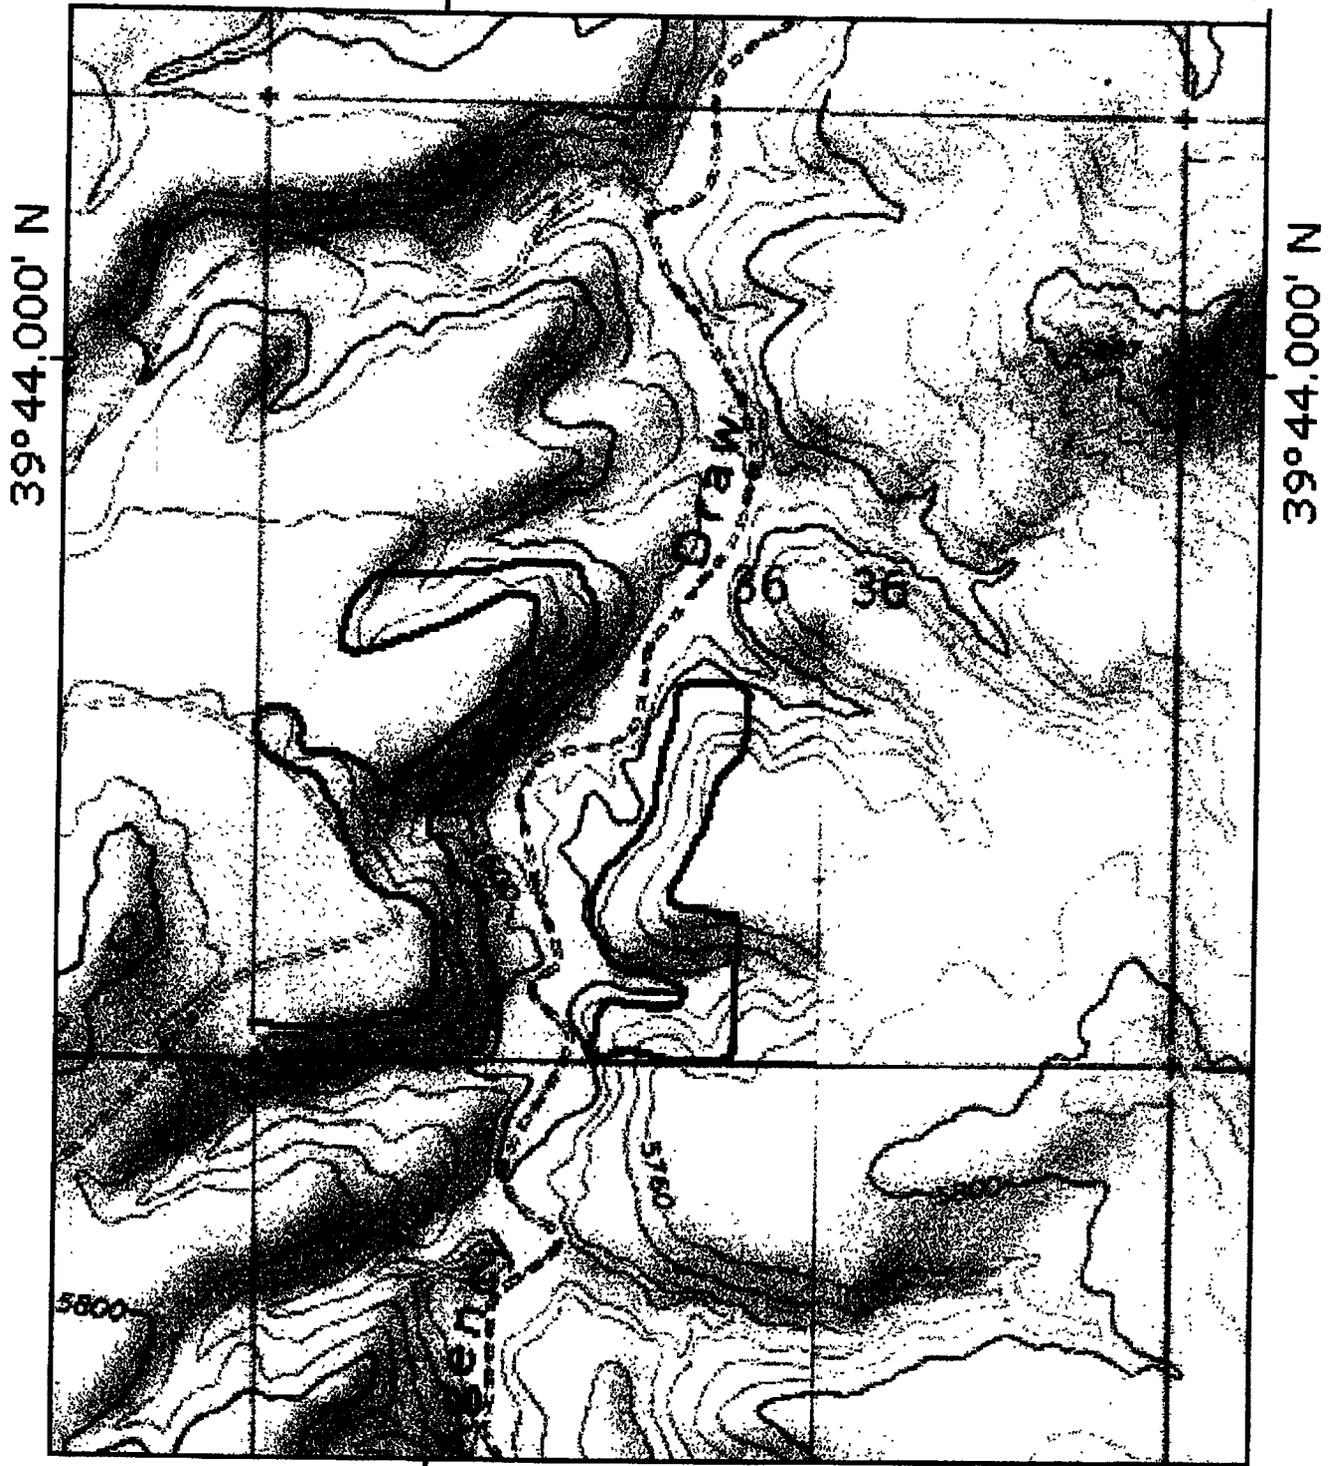

Sincerely,
